others. In doing so, we seek to avoid disrupting network service to customers. We may use information derived from these activities to identify and address security issues or to notify customers of issues.

As noted above, AT&T blocks certain ports that transfer malicious or disruptive traffic to protect our customers and our network. Below is more information about port blocking that is currently in place. We may block additional ports in the future based upon threat assessments.

Port	Transport	Protocol	Direction	Threats
0	TCP	Reserved	Both	Reserved Port
19	UDP	Chargen	Both	Reflective DDOS
25	TCP	SMTP	Outbound	SPAM, Malware
68	UDP	BOOTP	Outbound	DHCP server spoofing
123	UDP	NTP	Both	Reflective DDOS
135	TCP	NetBios	Both	Worms, Malware, Reflective DDOS
139	TCP	NetBios	Both	Worms, Malware
445	TCP	MS-DS SMB	Both	Worms, Malware
520	UDP	RIPv1	Both	Reflective DDOS
1900	UDP	SSDP	Both	Reflective DDOS
3479	TCP	Twrpc	Both	End user device instability
7547	TCP	CWMP	Inbound	End user device instability
61001	TCP	IPDR	Inbound	Data exposure, end user device instability

Port 0/TCP: Port 0 is a reserved port. This port should not be used for any applications. Blocking protects our customers from potentially harmful types of network abuses.

Port 19/UDP: Port 19 Chargen is a protocol designed to generate a stream of characters for debugging and measurement. Because more recent tools have been developed for measurement and debugging purposes, blocking protects against use of this port in Reflective DDOS attacks.

Port 25/TCP: Simple Mail Transport Protocol (SMTP) is used to send email. Port 25/TCP may be blocked from customers with dynamically-assigned Internet Protocol (IP) addresses to protect systems from becoming a mail relay for SPAM. Customers can subscribe to AT&T SMTP services if they need to host an SMTP server on the Internet.

Port 68/UDP: Port 68 is used to obtain dynamic IP address information from a dynamic host configuration protocol (DHCP) server. Port 68 may be blocked to eliminate the risk of exposure to a rogue DHCP server.

Port 123/UDP: Network Time Protocol (NTP) is used to accurately synchronize computer time of day to a reference time server. Some aspects of Port 123 may be limited to minimize malicious use. Poorly-configured NTP servers can be used for Reflective DDOS attacks, and some devices provide NTP service inadvertently, which exacerbates the port's malicious use.

Port 135/TCP: NetBIOS is a network file sharing protocol and is also known as Common Internet File System or LanManager. Blocking protects customers from exposing files unintentionally, worms, and viruses.

Port 139/TCP: NetBIOS is a network file sharing protocol and is also known as Common Internet File System or LanManager. Blocking protects customers from exposing critical system files unintentionally, which could give system access to a malicious actor.

Port 445/TCP: NetBIOS is a network file sharing protocol and is also known as Common Internet File System or LanManager. Blocking mitigates a potential threat to certain operating systems. Similar to our blocking of Ports 135 and 139, blocking Port 445 protects customers from exposing files unintentionally, worms, and viruses.

Port 520/UDP: RIPv1 - UDP port 520 is used by the Routing Information Protocol (RIP) to share network routing information. RIPv1 was designed to support route information sharing on small classful (class A, B, C, D) networks and has limited usefulness in today's classless networks. Port 520 has been used by malicious actors to generate Reflective DDOS attacks.

Exhibit 7.b.ii

Port 1900/UDP: Universal Plug and Play (UPnP) is a protocol standard designed to allow device discovery over a local network. Some home routers may expose this port to the Internet, which could allow attackers to defeat the security attributes of Network Address Translation (NAT) and allow attackers to use the port for Reflective DDOS attacks.

Port 3479/TCP: Twrpc is a protocol used for remote management of end user devices. Blocking this port protects customers from improper use of the port, which can cause end user device instability.

Port 7547/TCP: CPE WAN Management Protocol (CWMP) is a protocol used for remote management of end user devices. Blocking this port protects customers from improper use of the port, which can cause end user device instability.

Port 61001/TCP: Internet Protocol Detail Record (IPDR) is a specification used to collect information from end user devices including device configuration data. Blocking TCP port 61001 prevents certain types of malicious activity including data exposure and end user device attacks.

Does AT&T restrict the types of devices that customers can use with its mass market broadband Internet access services?

AT&T customers may use devices of their choice (PC, Smartphones, Tablets, Smart TV, etc.) to connect to our wired broadband Internet access service via the wiring at their home or business premises, or via Wi-Fi connected to their AT&T wired broadband Internet access service (connection options vary based on device capabilities). Customers of our mass market mobile services may attach 3G- or 4G-capable devices of their choice to our mobile broadband Internet access services, so long as the devices are FCC-approved, compatible with the technology used in our mobile network, and do not harm our network or other users. AT&T has retired its 2G network and we will not activate 2G-only capable devices. Our wired and Wi-Fi networks require compatible Ethernet or Wi-Fi capable devices. AT&T generally does not support IEEE2 802.11b or earlier Wi-Fi protocols. Devices must also be used in a manner consistent with our terms of service and Acceptable Use Policy. For example, some data plans are designated for use with only a basic phone or smartphone, in which case customers may not use their device to provide an Internet access connection to other equipment/devices (such as computers, netbooks, tablets, other phones, USB modems, network routers, media players, gaming consoles, or other data-capable devices) by tethering, by SIM card transfer, or any other means. However, customers wishing to use their service with a mobile hotspot/tethering device may purchase a data plan that already includes such use.

Performance Characteristics

What factors affect the performance of my mass market broadband Internet access service?

AT&T offers many mass market broadband Internet access service options, each of which may have a different service capability speed. The term speed is commonly used as a shorthand way to describe the capacity at which a particular mass market broadband Internet access service can transmit data. This capacity is typically measured in the number of kilobits, megabits or gigabits that can be transmitted in one second (Kbps, Mbps or Gbps). Some applications, like a short email without attachments or basic web browsing, do not require high service capability speeds to function optimally. Other activities, like transferring large data files, can be performed faster with higher-speed services. Your service capability speed may not be suitable for some applications, particularly those involving real-time or near real-time, high-bandwidth uses such as streaming video or video conferencing.

Because service performance varies on an end-to-end basis, AT&T's service capability speeds are limited to, and measured between, your location and a point on AT&T's network, which constitutes only one segment of the end to end transmission path connecting your location to Internet websites or content providers. End-to-end performance of your service depends on a variety of factors, including: the number of subscribers simultaneously using the network; customer location; destination and traffic on the Internet; Wi-Fi connectivity; the capabilities and performance of your Local Area Network (LAN); interference with high frequency spectrum on your telephone line; wiring inside your premises, office or apartment; the capacity or performance of your devices or modem; the server with which you are communicating; internal network management factors (including overhead, which refers to the various control and signaling data required to achieve the reliable transmission of Internet access data); and the networks you and others are using when communicating.

Exhibit 7.b.ii

AT&T offers a wide variety of services to its customers (including Voice over Internet Protocol (VoIP), Internet Protocol (IP)-video, unified messaging, Voice over LTE (VoLTE), enterprise networking services, and other services), which share AT&T's network infrastructure and may affect the availability of network resources for broadband Internet access services. Your use of these services may affect the performance of your mass market broadband Internet access service. These services may rely on particular network practices to assign different levels of priority dynamically or statically. AT&T does not currently have the capability to make any such functionality available to edge providers. In addition, although AT&T engineers its network to accommodate all users and user types based on a variety of factors, including average and anticipated peak usage of the network, many factors cannot be anticipated or are outside of AT&T's control. These factors can impact the availability of network resources for mass market broadband Internet access services at any particular time. Consequently, AT&T does not guarantee the performance of your service on an end-to-end basis.

Other factors that are relevant to specific services include, but are not limited to, the following:

- " Wired Services. Service performance may be affected by the wiring inside your premises, the distance between your premises and an AT&T central office, the capabilities of your computer, and the applications you use. In addition, to provide our U-verse TV customers with a consistently high-quality video service, the speed of AT&T broadband Internet access service may be reduced when a customer is using his or her U-verse TV service in a manner that requires high bandwidth. Please click here for our High-Speed Internet Access Terms of Service.
- " Mobile Services. Service performance may be affected by your proximity to a cell site, the capacity of the cell site, the number of other users connected to the same cell site and the services they are using, the surrounding terrain, use inside a building or a moving vehicle, radio frequency interference, the capabilities of your device, applicable network management practices as discussed above, and the applications you use. In addition, AT&T has designed its wireless services to provide our customers with a high-quality voice experience during simultaneous voice and data sessions, which may affect data performance, including but not limited to a temporary reduction in speed to minimize the likelihood of dropped calls.
- " Nationwide Wi-Fi Hotspot Services. Wi-Fi hot spots are generally provided at a given site on behalf of the business owner or operator for the benefit of their patrons. It is common practice that the Internet access is shared between both the business' patrons and the business' operational traffic. In some instances, business operational traffic may be prioritized to minimize the potential impact on critical communications, such as credit card processing. This prioritization may intermittently impact the speed available. Additionally, service performance may be affected by your proximity to a Wi-Fi hot spot, the capacity of the Wi-Fi equipment at the hot spot, the number of other users connected to the same site, the composition of the building where the hot spot is located (wood, concrete, etc.), radio frequency interference, the capabilities of your Wi-Fi capable device, the Internet connection to the Wi-Fi hot spot, per-user bandwidth limits used to provide fair Internet access at a hot spot, and speed tier options made available at the hot spot.

Where can I find information about the performance of my mass market broadband Internet access service?

Because many different factors can affect the performance of your mass market broadband Internet access service, AT&T does not guarantee specific performance levels (such as of speed or latency or packet loss) for our mass market broadband Internet access services. We strive to manage our network to provide you optimal performance. The performance you can expect to receive from the mass market broadband Internet access services we offer is described below.

Speed

- " Wired Service.
- " AT&T offers mass market wired broadband Internet access services in discrete speed tiers. Our mass market wired broadband Internet access customers should expect to see service capability speeds within the speed tier of their service plan. For example, a customer with AT&T's High Speed Internet Elite Service should expect service capability download speeds between 3.1 and 6.0 Mbps. Please click here for a list of our wired service offerings and expected speeds. To find out which speed tier is well-suited for the types of applications you use most often, please click here.
- " The table below sets forth data showing the median, and ranges of, actual download and upload speeds for AT&T's mass market wired broadband Internet access services, by transport technology and speed tier. The range reported is based on the 25th to the 75th percentile, which means that the 25th percentile lower bound is the value below which 25% of the test readings were, and the 75th percentile upper bound is the value below which 75% of the test readings were.

* Unless a service tier is noted with an asterisk (*), the reported information comes from data compiled by the FCC's Measuring Broadband America (MBA) initiative between March 2016 and August 2016. Service tiers noted with an asterisk were not included in the FCC's MBA initiative either because they are new products with limited availability or do not meet the program's reporting requirements. For more information about the FCC's MBA initiative, including how speeds are measured, go to www.fcc.gov/measuring-broadband-america.

- " Fixed Wireless Service. AT&T's mass market fixed wireless broadband Internet access service provides qualified households and small business with Internet access service using LTE technology, an outdoor antenna affixed to the customer's premises and an indoor Wi-Fi Gateway. The service is designed to provide high speed access to the Internet with download speeds of at least 10Mbps. It does not impose a maximum speed limit, and thus provides customers with the highest speed available from the network at the customer's location and at a given point of time. Service performance may be affected by your proximity to a cell site, the capacity of the cell site, the number of other users connected to the same cell site, the surrounding terrain, radio frequency interference, applicable network management practices, and the applications you use.
- " The table below sets forth data showing the actual download and upload speeds for AT&T's mass market fixed wireless broadband Internet access service.

	Download	Upload
Fixed Wireless Internet	10Mbps or over	1Mbps or over

Mobile Service. Most of AT&T's mass market mobile broadband Internet access services do not impose maximum speed limits, and thus provide customers with the highest speed available from the network at a particular location and at a given point in time, subject to the factors and the network management practices that can affect network performance, discussed above. Certain service plans include maximum data transmission rates for video and/or other data traffic. For example, AT&T's Unlimited Choice plan limits data transmission rates to 1.5Mbps for video and 3.0Mbps for other data traffic. Similarly, AT&T's Unlimited Plus plan provides customers a monthly per line allotment of mobile hotspot/tethering usage without any data transmission rate limit. After an AT&T Unlimited Plus plan customer has consumed the tethering allotment for a particular line, the data transmission rate for tethered data for that device will be limited to a significantly slower speed (e.g., 128Kbps) for the remainder of the bill cycle, as set forth in the terms of the plan.

In no case does AT&T guarantee particular speeds for its mass market mobile broadband Internet access services. Speeds available are affected by many different factors that can impact wireless network performance as discussed above. Based on data compiled by AT&T through crowd-sourced speed tests, AT&T expects customers will typically experience the following speeds, subject to location, device, and other factors as discussed above (the range reported is based on the 25th to the 75th percentile, which means that the 25th percentile lower bound is the value below which 25% of the test readings were, and the 75th percentile upper bound is the value below which 75% of the test readings were):

Technology	Download (in Mbps)	Upload (in Mbps)
3G	3 to 7	.7 to 1
4G	2 to 7	.4 to 1
4G LTE	6 to 29	2 to 11

Detailed download and upload speed performance by Cellular Market Area (CMA) can be found here.

Nationwide Wi-Fi Hotspot Service. AT&T's mass market Wi-Fi broadband Internet access service is designed to provide customers with the highest speed available from the network at any given point in time, subject to the many different factors discussed above that can affect network performance. AT&T's Wi-Fi services generally support the IEEE 802.11n/ac standard, with some AT&T locations also supporting the IEEE 802.11a/b/g standard. Although the IEEE 802.11 a/b/g/n/ac standards have theoretical maximum speeds ranging from over 10 Mbps to over a gigabit per second, actual Wi-Fi service speeds will be substantially lower than the theoretical maximum speeds which describe the physical throughput rate including Wi-Fi protocol communications; the result is that the theoretical maximum speed you can receive is 40%-50% of the quoted Wi-Fi standard speed. In addition to the factors discussed above, the actual speed you experience over Wi-Fi will depend in part on the speed of the connection between the Wi-Fi hotspot you are accessing and the destination you want to reach on the Internet, which may be significantly below the theoretical maximum speed of the service. For more information about AT&T's mass market Wi-Fi broadband Internet access services, please click here.

Exhibit 7.b.ii

Latency

Latency, also known as delay, is the amount of time from when a data packet is sent to when it is received. For mass market broadband Internet access services, latency is usually expressed as the round-trip time in milliseconds (ms) that it takes for a data packet to travel between two end points on the Internet (from point A to point B and then back to point A). Some applications, such as email, can tolerate a substantial amount of latency without any noticeable impact on the application's performance. Other applications, such as real-time video conferencing, require lower latency to function properly. End-to-end latency reflects the cumulative effect of the individual latencies that occur along the end-to-end network path.

Although latencies can vary due to several factors, including some beyond AT&T's control, our mass market broadband Internet access service customers can typically expect the following round-trip latencies when accessing the Internet:

Wired Service:

- " The table below sets forth data showing the median, and ranges of, actual latency for AT&T's mass market wired broadband Internet access services, by transport technology and speed tier. ### Packet Loss

Packet loss occurs when one or more packets of data traveling across the network fail to reach their destination, typically due to network congestion, and is measured as a percentage of packets lost with respect to packets sent. A small percentage of packet loss is inevitable, and indeed desirable, in Internet protocol networks and applications. These networks and applications have been designed to tolerate dropped packets and rely on packet retransmission to replace such packets to maintain high speed transmission of data across the Internet. Without some packet loss, network (and thus application) performance could degrade significantly. Although packet loss can vary due to several factors, including some beyond AT&T's control, our mass market wired broadband Internet access service customers can typically expect the following end-to-end packet loss statistics when accessing the Internet:

- Wired Service:

How we estimate

The examples below provide a general guideline for the amount of data used for each activity:

Activity	Data Size
1 email (no attachments)	20KB
1 email (with standard attachments)	300KB
1 min. of surfing the web	250KB(15MB/hr.)
1 song downloaded	4MB
1 photo upload to social media	5MB
1 min. of streaming standard-definition video	11.7MB (700MB/hr.)
1 min. of streaming high-definition video	41.7MB (2500MB/hr.)
1 min. of streaming 4K video	97.5MB (5850MB/hr.)
1 min. of online games	200KB (12MB/hr.)

Keep in mind that these examples are just estimates based on typical file sizes. Your usage may vary. **

Home Internet data usage FAQs

Home Internet data usage includes all data that you send and receive on your AT&T Internet, both wired and Wi-Fi. Learn how to manage, monitor, and estimate future data usage.

DETAILED INFORMATION

Data allowances and usage information

Why does AT&T have a data usage allowance for Internet customers?

This program is designed to help keep Internet service affordable for our broad base of customers given the rapidly increasing volume of data-rich Internet traffic.

What do you mean by data usage?

Usage includes all the data you receive (download) or send (upload). If you access the Internet through your home network, wired or Wi-Fi, using any device (including smartphones), that will be included in your data usage.

This includes software update requests, email notifications, and resend requests. Individual usage results may vary based on the applications you use and the content you access. For example, if your emails have large attachments, the usage for that application may exceed what we have estimated in the data calculator. See the online Data Calculator and instructional videos for further information.

For DSL, in some cases, AT&T is unable to measure your data usage due to system limitations. In that case, you will be unable to determine your usage using the data tracker, and AT&T will not charge you for usage over your data allowance.

- Learn how to check your Internet data usage.
- Learn how to estimate your future data usage with the Internet Data Calculator.

What is a gigabyte?

A gigabyte measures the amount of data you send and receive over the network – not the amount of time spent connecting to the Internet. A gigabyte (GB) is 1,073,741,824 bytes, 1,048,576 kilobytes, or 1024 megabytes.

Approximately 50,000 single-page emails without attachments, for example, would equal about 1GB. Watching an 80-minute movie in standard definition or about 20 minutes of a TV show or movie in high-definition each equals about 1GB.

What are the data allowances?

AT&T Internet service data allowances include the following:

- 150 Gigabytes (GB) per month for customers with DSL service.

Exhibit 7.d

- 160 GB per month for customers with Fixed Wireless Internet service.
- 1 Terabyte (TB) per month for Internet speed tiers up to and including 768 Kilobits per second (Kbps) through 300 Megabits per second (Mbps).
- Unlimited home Internet data for the Internet 1000Mbps speed tier.

The chart below provides an overview of Internet speeds and data allowances.

Will spending a lot of time on the Internet make me go over my allowance?

The types of activities performed matter more than the time spent online. For example, so-called data-rich activities, such as streaming video, may use more data than sending emails.

How would you describe what 1TB is in terms of what a typical customer would use?

1TB is far more data than a vast majority of customers use in a month. An average AT&T Internet customer uses just over a tenth of that amount, roughly 100GB of data per month. An average AT&T DSL customer uses about 70GB of data per month.

I don't know my current Internet speed tier or plan name ... how can I find out?

Exhibit 7.d

Your Internet speed tier and plan name can be found by signing into myAT&T from your computer or mobile device.

- 1 Go to your Account & services.
- 2 Under My Internet, your Internet speed tier will display.

Help me understand more about what I can do within my allowance each month.

First, find your data allowance in the table below, then read down the column for details about how that number translates into monthly activities.

If I use Wi-Fi, does that count as usage?

If you access your residential Internet over your Wi-Fi home network using any type of device (including smartphones and some home automation equipment), that counts as AT&T Internet data usage. However, if you access the Internet via a public or commercial Wi-Fi hotspot, that access does not count as usage.

Can anyone who doesn't live in my home affect my bandwidth usage?

That depends. AT&T residential gateways are secured. If you have some other gateway or router and have not secured it, someone nearby with a computer or other Wi-Fi enabled device could access your home network, use your high-speed Internet, and increase your usage. Common encryption protocols, such as Wireless Encryption Protocol (WEP) or Wi-Fi Protected Access (WPA), can provide additional security. Learn how to secure your AT&T-provided devices. Others can check their manufacturer's support website for help in securing their Wi-Fi gateway.

I have an AT&T MicroCell, which uses high-speed Internet in my home to boost wireless voice and data signals. Will that wireless usage count against monthly usage allowance?

No, the wireless traffic from an AT&T MicroCell is not included in your AT&T Internet data usage allowance. To help ensure accurate billing, you should register your AT&T

Exhibit 7.d

MicroCell account and residential AT&T Internet account at www.att.com/internet-usage-MicroCell. If you have Fixed Wireless Internet or Internet service with another provider, you do not need to register your account, and MicroCell usage will count against your monthly usage allowance.

I have a wireless U-verse TV or DIRECTV receiver in my home. Will that usage count against my monthly usage allowance?

No – viewing standard video content through a wireless U-verse TV or DIRECTV receiver connecting to the residential gateway will not count as data usage. Pay-per-view video, software updates, and DVR schedule data count as data usage.

Customers who subscribe to both services and pay for it on a single bill will receive unlimited home Internet data. To combine bills at no additional cost, a customer should visit att.com/CombineMyBills. (Unlimited Internet data is not available to DSL or Fixed Wireless Internet customers).

Will using AT&T applications count toward my data usage?

Yes, using some U-verse TV, mobile, tablet, and wearable applications may generate a small amount of usage. Following is a partial list of U-verse TV and AT&T applications that use the Internet and will have a small impact on usage when connected to your AT&T home network:

U-verse TV and AT&T applications that use the Internet
U-verse TV apps	iHeart Radio, U-verse Social, Food Network, Home Shopping Network, Interactive Workout, Karaoke TV app, Masters, Olympics, Santa Tracker, Stingray Music, Tumblebooks, TV Everywhere, U-verse Games, U-verse app for iOS, Android, or Amazon devices, Weather on Demand, What's Trending.
U-verse TV mobile, tablet, and wearable app	U-verse app for iOS, Android or Amazon devices.
AT&T apps and facilities	myAT&T, Digital Life, U-verse TV Poster Art.

Will using DIRECTV count toward my data usage?

Some DIRECTV features will count towards your data usage. These include:

- PPV
- OnDemand
- 4K programming

I am an AT&T wireless customer, and I read that I can watch TV with the DIRECTV or U-verse App without it counting against my wireless data. If I stream DIRECTV on my devices at home over Wi-Fi, will this count against my home Internet monthly usage allowance?

If you stream DIRECTV on your mobile device over your home internet service Wi-Fi connection, usage will count towards your home Internet monthly data usage allowance.

Exhibit 7.d

Will using SamKnows count toward my data usage?

If you are a participant in the SamKnows/FCC program, your usage levels may be impacted by the speed tests that are run.

Additionally, other speed test sites may impact your home data usage.

Check and manage data usage

How do I measure the amount of data I'm using?

A variety of free tools and communications are available to help you monitor and manage your data usage at our Internet usage page.

For example, you can learn which Internet activities have the largest impact on usage. Other aids include the AT&T Data Calculator, the myAT&T app, instructional videos, the proactive email notifications we'll send about your data usage, and ongoing customer communications pieces.

Sign in to myAT&T via the website or smartphone app to monitor usage and to view historical usage levels with a usage meter. This meter tracks all data uploaded and downloaded with internet-connected devices on your home network.

Is there anything else I need to know before looking over my personal usage?

A password is needed to access your information. This protects your confidential customer information. The sign-in is your AT&T primary account email address. For example, john.smith@att.net. The password is the same password you use to access your att.net homepage and att.net email account.

How often does AT&T update usage data?

Usage data is pulled from the network every 4 hours for most customers and at 15-minute increments for higher-usage customers.

Usage information for the first day of a new bill cycle may not be available for viewing until later on the first day of the new bill cycle. Time shown in the usage display is in terms of the GMT (Greenwich Mean Time) time zone which is behind the U.S. time zones. For example, if you are in the CST time zone (Central Standard Time), CST is 5 hours behind GMT. So when it is 10 a.m. CST, the time will be displayed as 3 p.m.

If I decide I want to start routinely checking on my usage, is anything available to make it simple?

You can view and manage your home Internet usage through myAT&T. This portal also enables you to download your most recent AT&T bill, which also includes additional usage details.

What if I want to estimate my usage in the future? Is that possible?

Yes. We're providing several tools to help. You can quickly estimate the amount of data your favorite activities use by visiting the AT&T Data Calculator. The calculator can also help estimate approximate monthly usage.

How do I know if I went over, or if I'm about to go over?

If a customer does not receive a notice from AT&T, it means the customer will not incur additional charges for exceeding the monthly data allowance.

To help advise our customers of their usage we provide a total of seven notices before additional charges will affect the bill. Notices are sent at 100% usage in the first month, and 65%, 90% and 100% usage in subsequent months.

Exhibit 7.d

Can you provide more information on how I'm notified about approaching or exceeding the data allowance?

You'll receive an email notice during the first billing cycle in which you exceed the monthly data allowance, but you will not be charged. In the following billing cycle, you'll receive notices any time usage reaches 65%, 90% and 100% of the allowance, but you will not be charged. During later billing cycles you'll receive notices when usage reaches 65%, 90% and 100% of the allowance. At this point, as our agreement provides, you'll receive an additional 50 gigabytes of data for $10, with a maximum of $100 per billing cycle for AT&T Internet, or $200 for DSL and Fixed Wireless Internet. In any subsequent month, you'll receive notices when usage reaches 75% and 100% of the allowance.

Where will notifications about my usage be sent?

You'll receive email notices about your home Internet usage at the primary email address you set up when you registered for service. AT&T sends a letter by U.S. mail if we cannot reach you by email or do not have your email address.

Is there a way to check what I have as my primary email address? What if I need to change it?

Your att.net email address can be found by signing into myAT&T.

- 1 Go to your Account & services.
- 2 Select My Internet.
- 3 Under My Plan, select Manage my plan.
- 4 Next to your Internet plan name, select Plan Details.
- 5 Scroll to the My Email Addresses section and find the address marked primary.

What happens if I exceed the allowance?

As data usage exceeds the additional allowance in a single bill cycle, you'll receive another 50GB of data for $10 up to a maximum monthly overage charge of $100 for AT&T Internet and DSL, or $200 for Fixed Wireless Internet.

If I go over my monthly data allowance, when will usage charges appear on my bill?

The usage measurement is based on your billing date. If usage charges are incurred they will be outlined on AT&T bills after usage takes place. Depending on your billing date and when you exceeded your data allowance in your billing cycle, it may take one to two billing cycles before charges appear on the bill. If you go over the monthly data allowance for a third time, charges for the additional data typically appear on the following month's bill.

How do you know that your usage measurement is accurate?

A dedicated team of trained and specialized AT&T lab engineers thoroughly review and check the accuracy of our system on a regular basis.

Is AT&T implementing these data allowances to make customers pay more for the same service?

No. The monthly data allowances have been in place for all AT&T Internet customers since 2011. We anticipate that most customers will rarely go over their current monthly data allowance.

Unlimited usage for AT&T Internet customers

Exhibit 7.d

Note: AT&T DSL and Fixed Wireless Internet customers are NOT eligible for Unlimited Internet Data.

What is Unlimited Internet Data Usage and how do I become eligible?

Unlimited usage means you can stream, download, and browse your favorite content and connect all your devices without needing to keep usage within a usage allowance. Additionally, you will not receive overage notifications or overage charges. You will still be able to view your usage in your monthly statements.

You are eligible for unlimited home Internet data if you have a combined bill for Internet and TV services, you purchase the Internet 1000 speed tier, or you purchase the unlimited data usage option.

- Combined bill - The unlimited data usage option (a $30 value) is available to customers paying for their new or existing internet service (other than AT&T DSL or Fixed Wireless Internet) with their new or existing AT&T television service (DIRECTV or U-verse) on a combined bill. Customers currently subscribing to both services on separate bills can visit <http://att.com/CombineMyBills> to combine their bills at no additional cost.
- Internet 1000 - In available areas, when you sign up for our Internet 1000 speed tier you will receive unlimited home Internet data.
- Unlimited usage option - The unlimited usage option is also available to customers without AT&T television services for $30 more a month; the option can be added at any time at <http://att.com/UnlimitedUverseData>.

If I have the unlimited offer, will AT&T downgrade or optimize the quality of service at any point?

We treat all of our customers' Internet traffic the same, regardless if they are receiving unlimited data through bundling, adding it to their existing service or have a monthly data allowance.

AT&T has previously said it implemented data allowances to ensure it is providing a sustainable network to customers. Will offering unlimited data to AT&T home Internet customers negatively impact the AT&T network?

No. AT&T will continue to actively manage the network to handle the increasing demand for data.

Are you offering unique video content with this offer?

We already have some of the most one-of-a-kind content in the industry, like NFL SUNDAY TICKET. But, with unlimited home Internet data, our customers will be able to access all of the same favorite content they access today, whether it's NFL SUNDAY TICKET or video from another streaming service.

Who is eligible?

AT&T Internet customers are eligible (DSL and Fixed Wireless Internet customers are not eligible). Customers who have the Internet 1000 speed tier or who also subscribe to TV from AT&T (DIRECTV or U-verse) on a combined bill will receive unlimited data (a $30 value), automatically at no additional charge. Business customers are not eligible.

Note: You must pay for your AT&T Internet and TV service on a combined bill to receive unlimited home Internet data ($30 value) at no additional charge. If you move from U-verse TV to DIRECTV, or vice versa, you may have to re-combine your TV & Internet bills. Please ensure the name on your DIRECTV account matches the name on your Internet account exactly. For more info, go to www.att.com/internet-usage.

Exhibit 7.d

What if I can't get DIRECTV or U-verse where I live?

The unlimited usage option is available to AT&T Internet customers (excluding DSL and Fixed Wireless Internet) for an additional $30 per month.

The Basics of Using Internet Data

2:31

Data usage basics

We measure data in gigabytes. That's the amount of data you download and upload from all the connected devices in your home each month. Each of our plans comes with a monthly data allowance.

AT&T Internet plans

You will receive an email notice the first time your usage exceeds the monthly data allowance. In subsequent months we will continue to send you alerts if your usage approaches or exceeds the amount of data included in your plan. If you exceed your monthly data plan a third time (bill cycle), and as our agreement provides, we'll charge you $10 for each additional 50GB of data provided to you that month. The maximum overage charge is $100 a month for AT&T Internet and $200 a month for DSL and Fixed Wireless Internet.

A $30 unlimited data allowance is also available for AT&T Internet customers to purchase as an optional feature of your Internet service. Or if you purchase DIRECTV or U-verse TV service with your Internet service on a combined bill, you will receive an unlimited usage allowance. That's a $30 value at no additional charge as part of the discount. This is only available for AT&T Internet, not DSL or Fixed Wireless Internet.

Data usage basics

We measure data in gigabytes. That's the amount of data you download and upload from all the connected devices in your home each month. Each of our plans comes with a monthly data allowance.

AT&T Internet plans

You will receive an email notice the first time your usage exceeds the monthly data allowance. In subsequent months we will continue to send you alerts if your usage approaches or exceeds the amount of data included in your plan. If you exceed your monthly data plan a third time (bill cycle), and as our agreement provides, we'll charge you $10 for each additional 50GB of data provided to you that month. The maximum overage charge is $100 a month for AT&T Internet and $200 a month for DSL and Fixed Wireless Internet.

A $30 unlimited data allowance is also available for AT&T Internet customers to purchase as an optional feature of your Internet service. Or if you purchase DIRECTV or U-verse TV service with your Internet service on a combined bill, you will receive an unlimited usage allowance. That's a $30 value at no additional charge as part of the discount. This is only available for AT&T Internet, not DSL or Fixed Wireless Internet.

How much data do I need?

Some things to keep in mind as you estimate your data:

Downloading an HD movie is very data heavy, but sending a simple text email uses hardly any data at all.

Streaming video or music uses data that can add up quickly.
